BOOK COVER

Book covers, or "jackets" as they are called in publishing circles, are notoriously dull. They give no indication of the contents of the book and that's the problem. Well, we haven't solved the problem. Our book cover says nothing, except that it's a book cover. You might as well use yesterday's newspaper to wrap your book in. But if you do use this one, make sure you get a book that fits. Now, that makes sense, doesn't it?

Recently a group of traffic experts said that unless cars were kept off the streets of New York, the city would choke itself to death. A few days later, the Mayor announced a trial plan to ban automobiles from a small downtown area to allow pedestrians to stroll during lunch hour. But that's not going to help. Mid-town is the problem. And the situation's getting worse. Let's look at what might happen in another year or two.

CITY

DRIVERS

THE PARKING PROBLEM

Good afternoon, ladies and gentlemen, this is Ray Wodnast of the New York Spritely Broadcasting Company speaking to you from the automobile owned and driven by Mr. Leonard Smarl who has been driving around the city for the past four days trying to find a parking space. How do you feel, Mr. Smarl?

They say your legs are the first to go, but I feel it up through my shoulders. And my arms keep falling asleep.

But you yourself haven't slept?

Good drivers never drowse at the wheel. If it weren't for those red lights I'd never get any rest at all. Tension, tension.

Here's dinner, Dad. There's cranberry sauce in a plastic container just like you always eat.

Thanks, son.

He's a good boy, but I see so little of him these days.

Are you still optimistic about finding a parking place?

The answer to everything is spirit and determination. I'll do it!

Hey, that looks like an opening down there!!

No. Fire hydrant. I used to get fooled like that. But I know every fire hydrant in midtown.

The price of mechanization. Do you have a specific route?

I pass the house four times a day. In the morning the kids leap in and I take them to school. Later, I come back and the wife hops in with coffee, mail and the latest gossip. Around 7 p.m. I drop back again, give her a wave and throw her a good-night kiss.

Let me ask you. Through all these hardships and traffic travail, do you think this can lead to any possible good?

Well, it could solve the population explosion.

LATE NEWS

Washington, D.C. The Supreme Court recently came to a unanimous decision—when Raquel Welch paid them a visit!

Washington, D.C. Rumor has it that President Nixon is sending Spiro Agnew to Scandinavia, so that he can pick up some really fresh Danish.

Los Angeles. A local fellow went to a head-shrinker for years without results, until they discovered that his skull was sanforized!

Denver. A citizen gave his sweet old grandmother a carton of steel wool for Christmas, and she knitted him a Volkswagen!

Burton and his party hide out in an abandoned Alpine hut—he couldn't find a motel!

Men, before we set out on this mission, there's an important underground contact I've got to make. In fact, it may just save the day.

Ah, Helga, at last we make contact!

But my name is Yvette.

Oh, are you Free French?

No, but I'm quite reasonable!

Captain, what are you doing! The whole civilized world hangs upon the success of this mission, D-Day is involved, the whole course of the war—and here you are messing around with this broad. Why don't you have a little prudence?

Prudence? Oh, is she here too? By all means, bring her on!

Back in the Alpine hut.

Gentlemen, we've been in Germany only three days and already we've lost half of our men.

Wilkinson, Chesney and Schwartz are all kaput. And what makes it even stranger, they've all died smiling.

Someone who knows my habits has been getting at the men. I wonder who it can be? By the way, Eastwood, where's Jones?

Out here, captain.

What's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. If Dick can horse around, so can I.

You bet your bird, Elizabeth! Eastwood, contact London immediately. Tell them that the only way up to the castle is by cable car.

And since the Nazis are riding on the inside, we'll have to travel 9 thousand feet straight up while hanging onto a guy wire atop the car like acrobats, practically by our teeth.

I've got an answer, sir!

From the High Command?

No, from Ed Sullivan. He says he wants us to do it all over again next week, "right here on this stage!"

Soon, atop the cable car...

GERT WASN'T THAT CABLE STEEPER?

YES, BUT THIS IS THE ONLY WAY IT FITS IN THIS PANEL.

You say the Nazi General Staff is having a get-together in the castle tonight?

Right, why do you ask?

There must be an easier way to crash a party!

Look on the bright side, Eastwood. By making a picture at this fantastic height, it can't possibly stink—the air is too rarified.

Their mission a smashing success (they both got smashed when they discovered schnapps)

Campus Report

Script by Fred Wolfe
Art by Don Orehek

A college student was recently arrested for making several non-negotiable demands—he made them in the girl's dormitory!

A professor remembers when an average American lad used to be more interested in throwing out the first baseball instead of the first dean!

A campus protester was given 20 years for burning somebody else's draft card—it was in the back pocket of a cop!

A college instructor was recently thrown off campus for advocating a tremendously radical concept. He actually believed that the purpose of the university was education!

A famous dean who wishes to remain nameless states that most of the students don't want R.O.T.C. on campus, but that most of the faculty do—to learn self-defense!

A noted educator believes that the youth of today are more mature—claims they're taking out fewer books and more librarians!

GOODBYE COLUMBUS

No, the title is not based on what Queen Isabella said to America's discoverer as he set sail in 1492.

What the title means is that a young man leaves Columbus, Ohio, and says "Goodbye, Columbus." It could easily have been "Goodbye, Cleveland," but that's another picture. That title is almost as popular as "Goodbye, New York," which is being said more and more these days by New Yorkers leaving Fun City.

Actually, the original story is set in New Jersey, along with numerous oil tanks and pig farms which you can see (and smell) from the New Jersey Turnpike if the wind is right. Or wrong.

The movie, starring Richard Benjamin (of "He and She" on TV) and Ali MacGraw (A real Alley Cat), is based on Philip Roth's novella of the same name. Roth later wrote "Portnoy's Complaint," dubious literary progression at best, according to some critics. The producers of the film switched the setting from New Jersey cities of Newark and Short Hills to the Bronx and Westchester. It's their way of waxing Roth for audience identification.

1—Richard Benjamin is a Bronx boy from a middle-class Jewish family. He's so all-American Jewish that he walks around with apple pie in one hand, and matzoh balls in the other. He meets Brenda Patimkin, attractive daughter of a pair of wealthy Westchesterites who are so rich they have their sofas stuffed with dollar bills. Papa Patimkin, played by Jack Klugman, earned his money by manufacturing tiny, red-crested toupees for vain roosters.

2—Ali is the aggressor. She lures Benjamin up to her palatial mansion with tales of tennis, canapes that stick to the roof of your mouth and a swimming pool shaped like Buster Crabbe. Naturally he is impressed. On TV he lived in a little apartment next to a firehouse. He spent half the season sleeping with a firehose draped across his bed. He likes her style. They play tennis. He shows her his backhand and she shows him her forehand and a great deal of her legs.

3—Benjamin is a solid librarian so he learns to read Ali like a book. Fiction. Since he sees her as the "Tale of Two Cities." He also realizes that she is compulsive, headstrong and sure of herself. Well, this is the perfect match for him, because he is weak, uncertain and thinks all elevators are about to go through the floor and deposit him in the subway. And he hates subways. That's the way he expresses it. Even though it's a local joke.

4—The parents of Ali are somewhat gross (no relations to the Somewhat Grosses of Forest Hills) and a bit snobbish. When the mother meets Benjamin she asks coolly, "Oh, so you're in the library business." Benjamin replies, "Yes, and I really like to keep my circulation going," as he squeezes Ali gently. Mr. Patimkin is head of the Pitimkin Sink Co., and he keeps putting the plug in for the firm every chance he gets.

5—The romance between Ali and Benjamin grows heated at this lavish reception sometime between the soup and coffee. It is a nine course dinner, complete with eight coarse guests. It is an elaborate affair. There is a nice sculpture of Peggy Fleming skating after Shipstad and Johnson, a potato salad figurine of Clifton Webb and an etching made of watermelons called "Watch on the Rind." It didn't taste too good, but it won three art awards.

This is a darn good late night movie. I've already eaten four bunches of grapes.

Kiss me, Raquel. Hold me, Sophia. Watch it, Gina.

I've had better stuff than this off a pushcart on Second Avenue.

There's something furry floating in my martini.

Hope she didn't notice my toupee fell into her martini.

Get me a net. Something moved

20 years in the sink business and this costs so much it'll go down the drain.

6—The dinner is a great success. Nine cases of heartburn are chalked up, a new Westchester record. The high point of the affair is when one busy eater swallows his own stomach pump. They have to stuff him with whitefish to get it back. Meanwhile, Benjamin falls into the clutches of the wilful Ali. (No relation to Schubert Ali.) She knows Benjamin is not acceptable to her haughty parents, and keeps him around like a yo-yo on a string just to taunt them. Yo-Yo Benjamin plays it straight, enjoying his ups and downs.

7—Ali defies her parents by keeping Benjamin in the house overnight. In the morning they play hide-and-seek trying to find him. Benjamin is so thin three maids made up the bed with him still in it and didn't even notice the lump. Later when the bedding came back from the laundry, Benjamin did look exceptionally clean and well-pressed. Ali's parents accept her behavior with Benjamin as part of her generation's revolt, like when she insisted on being driven to her classes at Columbia University in a chauffeur-driven tank.

8—Just as some people say marriage is a case of Lure and then Endure, Ali's technique with Benjamin is Compell and then Repell. She ends their affair so abruptly Benjamin gets whiplash injuries. She dismisses him airily, tossing him aside like an old Dixie Cup. (No relation to Dixie Cup who used to dance the mazurka on 29th Street). Ali goes back to her parents to await the arrival of a suitor with some financial attributes equal to her own family's, while Benjamin goes back to the library and pores over all the books—wetting them badly.

CRIME RULES IN THE CITIES

New York City has recently issued a set of rules for citizens to follow in an effort to cut down the incidents of crime. But no matter how helpful the rules are, there are always some people who get in trouble when they follow the rules. People like Sam Sickney.

BURLESQUE COMES TO THE VAST WASTELAND

Have you ever noticed the type of people who watch TV's DIVORCE COURT? You know who watches DIVORCE COURT? It's the gamey old bird who used to watch Burlesque shows. That's because the old burlesque routines were so much like DIVORCE COURT, it's downright embarrassing. Who told us? A gamey little old bird.

DIVORCE SPORT

TV's Sick Success Story

"O-Yez, O-Yez. The case before the Court of Indecent Relations is Fish versus Fish, the husband seeking a divorce on the grounds of adultery, lewd behavior, lascivious activities, and leaving the cap off the toothpaste! Judge P. Ping Tom presiding. Mr. Fish will take the stand."

Before this case starts, I'd like to get one thing settled.

What's that, your honor?

Is he the husband or the wife?

In your own words, Mr. Fish, tell the court about your wife's strange behavior.

Me strange? Your honor, did you cop a good gander at him?

She's got a good point there. Proceed Mr. Fish.

My wife is an airline stewardess, and the two of us flew away on our honeymoon. And the very first night, in our honeymoon suite, I found her kissing the pilot.

Go on, Mr. Fish.

And when I asked her, is this any way to run an airline? she said...

YOU BET IT IS!

Order in the court!

Two beers!

A ham on rye!

One scotch!

Coffee, tea or me?

Did you get that, clerk?

Yes, your honor.

Good. Run out as soon as this is over. We can't make a living on the crummy pay we get. Proceed, Mr. Prosecutor.

Your honor, these charges are all unsubstantiated. The prosecuting attorney hasn't produced one shred of evidence to back up his contention that Mrs. Fish was playing around.

I'm glad you brought that up. Your honor, I would like to present my star witness, private detective, J. Gumshoe Flatfoot, who should shed some light on this matter.

Well, I don't know about that. There was very little light in the motel room where I found Mrs. Fish in the arms of her elderly lover.

Can you tell us anything about him?

Well, he was very spry for a guy his age. He leaped clear out of the window when I entered the room. I didn't get a good look at him, but I heard her call him Cuddles.

Have you any further evidence?

Yeah, I managed to get several snappy pictures of Mrs. Fish in the all-together.

You left out collusion.

Nevertheless, my verdict stands. Not only that, I'm awarding the young lady sole custody of Mr. Fish's hairdresser.

You tell him, Cuddles, baby!

rodriguezTURNED ON

This candid cartoon feature has received a great many letters, but we're going to do it again anyway. That's because cartoonist Charles Rodrigues is so lovable. Except when it comes to the establishment. "Why don't we draft older men to fight in Viet Nam," demands Charles. "If they're old enough to vote they're old enough to be drafted!"

Charles is now crusading against police brutality: "There's an easy way for the fuzz to disperse a crowd—pass the hat for some charity cause."

The medical profession is another target for his wrath. "I know a doctor who hits your knee with a golf club," he relates. "This way he tests your reflexes and gets in a few practice swings at the same time."

"We've got 47 carts . . .
my cart is strawberry."

"Ma, can I use the hair dryer tonight?"

"Aw, heck, lady, he's been dead for years!"

"They don't make these things like they used to . . ."

BE AN ENTERTAINER

Here's another chunk of material for all of you future comics out there. Try this in the style of Don Adams as he tries during the half-time break to get his football team "up" for a victory.

FOOTBALL COACH

Script by Bill Majeski

Art by Jack Sparling

Sweeney and Jones you did a fine job on their halfback when you hit him high and low and they carried him off the field. But next time wait until after the game starts.

You, Blandings, you missed eight tackles. Hennessy, stand up. Blandings let's see you tackle him. Right. Tackle him, not tickle him! Boy!

Don't you want to get your letter in football this year? What would you do if you get your football letter?

...Have someone read it to you.

That figures.

Johnson, today you showed a little of your old-time form as our leading runner. You were twisting, leaping, jumping, spinning. But why weren't you doing that on the field instead of with the cheerleaders?

What? Because it's safer there.

Okay, but cut the clowning.

Besides, you don't look very nice in that sweater and skirt.

What you fellows need is a refresher in the basic fundamentals. MacIntosh, what do you think of when I say single wing?

...a wounded bird.

Beautiful.

You linemen have been caught five times for violations. Bradshaw, what happens when you get caught for illegal holding?...She slaps your face.

Men, your haphazard, indifferent playing has turned the whole school against me. Other marching bands spell out "Go, Team, Go" when they do their drills on the field. Did you see what our band was spelling out? "Coach, Go Home!"

Well, I'm not going to stand for that. In the second half we're going to try a new defense. It's a 6-3-3-2-2-1. I know that's 17 men. We'll outnumber 'em, it's the only chance we've got.

I don't like to resort to tear-jerking histrionics, but today, well...I have a favor to ask.

My little old mama would like it very much if we won today.

...in fact, she's so sick, she shouldn't even be here playing today.

Hi, mom, you're looking great out there. Sure beats staying home with the old man, right?

Now I want you to race out through that door like you mean business. I know you're crippled, bruised and battered, but go out there and tear those vicious monsters apart.

Okay! Open the door!

Hey, not that door. You're going the wrong way. The field's this way! Come back!

You know, maybe those guys aren't so dumb after all.

THE LATE, LATE, LATE

Africa. When asked about their missile program, the Minister of Nyasaland tells us that their new "sophisticated" rockets are going higher than ever before. Said the Minister: "Last time we blew the roof right off the hut!"

Hollywood. It is rumored that the marriage of Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor may be on the rocks. The only problem is, they don't know who will get custody of their full-length mirror.

Los Alamos. Sources close to the government say they're going ahead with a new "clean" atomic bomb. Vying for the contract are: Vel, Rinso, Lux and Super Suds.

Berlin. The new German cruise ship "Hamburg" recently announced its itinerary—Two glorious weeks touring well-fortified islands. And, as an extra added attraction, you get to witness the sinking of an Allied convoy!

The Bowery. They've just come up with a sure-fire gimmick to stop people from drinking—it's called a cork!

Rhode Island. Plans are under way to hold a lottery. The winner gets the entire state!

Chicago. When a hippie got up to make a speech, Mayor Daley gave him a great big hand—the marks are starting to wear off!

New York. Madison Avenue is all agog over the new "Hickock" slogan: "Remember, men, you can never go wrong by giving your wife a good belt for her birthday!"

Haight-Ashbury. Flash! (Or is it flush?) A hippie scientist crossed L.S.D. with Ex-Lax. Now when he takes a "trip," he knows where he's going!

Las Vegas. A militant made a demand for one billion dollars in reparations—so Howard Hughes took it out of petty cash!

RIOTERS OF THE MONTH

FERDINAND KLUTZ
Kansas City

for barricading himself in a Dean's office for 97 consecutive days. Trouble was, he didn't plan it that way. He just couldn't get the door open.

HARVEY SCHMIDLAP
Jersey City

for getting himself expelled from a college 14 times in one semester. This isn't too unusual except when you realize he wasn't even a student there.

ZELDA GROVIS
Salt Lake City

for being the first girl in her exclusive school to smoke pot. Not marijuana, mind you, she smoked a real pot.

SEYMOUR STURDLEY
Open City

for setting fire to his draft card. Now this doesn't mean anything these days, but the draft card was in his Draft Board at the time.

Dear Abby Hoffman: ADVICE TO THE STRIKE LORN

I'm at my wits' end. Tell me—what's the best way to bug your parents?

REAL DRAGGED

Hide a transmitter in their phone box.

Tell the truth—what's the main reason for student unrest?

PERPLEXED

Not enough rest rooms.

My question is, how do you feel about Exchange Students?

BUGGED

That depends on what you exchange them for.

I'm not at all like the other modern students. I don't protest, I don't strike, I attend classes regularly, I wear a shirt and tie, I study hard and obey the rules. Don't you think I should get a degree?

ANXIOUS

Yes—the THIRD!

I'm torn between taking two courses this semester. Do you think I'd be better off taking Medicine or Physics?

UNDECIDED

That depends on whether you're sick or just constipated.

BE AN EVEN BETTER STUDENT PROTESTER ENROLL TODAY IN THE HOSTILE SCHOOL FOR REVOLTING STUDENTS

Learn how to burn down entire buildings with one match; how to barricade yourself in a building so you can stay there the entire 4 years of your career and still graduate; how to go on long marches without even leaving the campus; how to avoid getting a hernia while being carted off by the fuzz; and many other important topics.

Our Faculty consists of some of the biggest troublemakers in campus history. We are co-ed and are approved for foreign protesters. Correspondence courses available in plain brown wrappings. Hurry and enroll before we're shut down by the Board of Health!

CONTEST

Win a Draft Deferment! (or $10 in cash)

Complete this sentence in 25 words or less: "I hate the establishment because....."

—RULES—

Use 4-letter words only. Enclose an ounce of marijuana with each entry. Decision of the Judges is final—subject to graft, that is.

WINNER WILL ALSO RECEIVE FREE:

- A year's supply of LSD
- A 2-week stay barricaded in a Principal's Office
 - A 40-lb can of gasoline to start a fire
 - Answers to all exams for the next 20 years
 - A dart board with Ronald Reagan's face on it
 - and many other prizes!

CONTEST ENDS JANUARY 1, 1970

OPEN LETTER FROM BERKELEY:

WE DEMAND FULL ACADEMIC CREDITS FOR THE 8 MONTHS WE SPENT STRIKING!

by
The STUDENTS FOR PEACE Society

Let's face it! Just because we exercised our given right of free speech and demonstration, this is no reason to penalize us for the 246 school days we missed. We demand full academic credit for this period. Not only that, we want straight A's besides.

Now, we don't believe we're asking for a lot. After all, we didn't do much damage. All we did was set fire to a few buildings, barricade ourselves in the boiler room for a couple of months, kidnap the Bursar and hold her for ransom and sprinkle LSD in the ground floor water fountains. Is this any reason to penalize us academically? Be a little annoyed, yes—but don't hold a grudge!

If you think we've done anything, just look at what the administration is doing to us. It's outrageous. They don't let us dictate school policy; they don't let us make up our own curricula; they don't let us form militant groups on campus; they don't even let us throw out all those we feel are undesirable. Tell the truth—are we asking too much? Aren't we only seeking what we're entitled to?

No wonder we're demonstrating all over the country. Look at the intolerable conditions under which we have to attend school. All we can say is: is this any way to run a University? You bet it ain't!

What's Good to Take in School this Semester

Namely, the Dean's Office and the Administration Building

A lot of students have been asking themselves what they should take this semester. Well, they needn't worry about it any longer. A recent poll showed that the most worthwhile things to take today are the Dean's Office and the Administration Building! These are guaranteed to bring about the best academic results with the most fun and socializing.

Libraries are also groovy places to take over, as you can continue your studies by reading a lot of books there. Only trouble is, communication is difficult since you can't talk loudly. On the other hand, Gymnasiums are ideal places in which to stage a siege. Here you have a lot of room to move about, can scream at the top of your lungs, and get in a little exercise besides. And just think of the great fun you can have by holding a Love-In on the foul line!

An offbeat place that has recently become very popular to take over is the Lavatory. Here they must meet your demands as it's really the one place they must have access to. Girls' Lavatories are usually more comfortable to wait in, although Boys' Lavatories have more standing room areas. In either case, there are good seats available if you get there early.

Other scintillating spots to siege are Lunch-rooms (where you can hold out the whole year); basements (where at least you'll keep warm during the winter) and Dormitory Basins (ideal for summer sieges and you can get yourself a nice sun tan while striking). But no matter what you take, remember: You are still students in a sacred place of learning and should conduct yourselves with the proper decorum.

For those of you, however, who are so radical that you have to be different, there are other things you can take while at college this term. For example, auditoriums are in this year because large groups can barricade themselves inside without having to sit on the floor. You can even use the stage to put on shows to while away those long hours while they're looking over your list of demands.
